TACOMA, WA. 98402

As we set ourselves and our nation to approach a third century, we must start with the recognition that while, in the beginning, the earliest contests for survival were between man and nature and man and man, the great contest which looms now before our nation is that of man against the consequences of his own inventiveness and success in science and technology.

Every American, as indeed every person, wants to feel a sense of belonging that is significant and mutually enhancing. Fundamental to that sense of belonging are the institutions of family, peer group, community and country. Any Americans who are invidiously alienated from these fundamental relationships are in that degree deprived of participation in the commitment to the happiness of mankind. Any twisting or distortion of the elements to cheapen or destroy those foundational relationships in that degree undermines the foundation of democracy.

But let us look hopefully and optimistically beyond negative possibilities, the present confusions and the past remissions. Let us imagine what, in simple terms, the governmental commitment to the pursuit of happiness and the happiness of mankind should mean in terms of we, the people.

Happiness of mankind should mean that, as distinguished from all other forms of government, the United States Government in all its national policy and state actions, whether involving science; technology, economics or social policy, shall place human benefit above those others and especially above science, technology and economic profit.

Happiness of mankind should encompass responsibility to individual merit, and to an ideal of excellence coupled with full opportunity from the beginning of life for persons to grow into disciplines of personal achievement and satisfaction.

Happiness of mankind is keeping open the avenues and universalizing the opportunities for every person in whatever condition to be his or her best in useful and beneficient extensions of himself or herself beyond the narrow and alienating confines which induce unproductivity, unrecognition and unresponse. Everyone not only desires, but needs, the opportunity to be larger than self - larger in quality and in sharing of achievement than he or she could ever be without adequate opportunity for self-realization.

Happiness of mankind is a confident and loving belonging to family, to community and to nation in which trust, credibility and integrity are not hollow platitudes, but fundamental realities.

Happiness of mankind is the restoration of respect within our domestic institutions of school,religion, communication and government; not by ceremonial, ideological and dogmatic dictum, but by actually removing the paradoxes and the hypocrises which make our institutional behaviors so contradictory to their high and lofty principles.

Happiness is taking note of an inscription in the Omar N. Bradley room of the Army War Museum which reads:

We need to learn how men might live as charitably together in peace as they died for each other in war.

Then the mote of hypocrisy, which is as a cannonball in our nation's eye, will dissolve in the sight of all, both at home and abroad. The uniqueness of the heart of our democracy will have met its final test; and we, the people, the greatest and the least of these our brethren, will know the meaning of the capability of our nation and our Constitution to regenerate with each generation. Our generation will have restored to prosperity the confidence and the strength that: "...this nation under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth."

That is what happiness really could mean to us. RIGHT ON!

Ninth Infantry Celebrates 58th Anniversary

FORT LEWIS, WA. -- The 9th Infantry Division will celebrate its 58th anniversary July 16th with an "Octofoil Day" parade and a mock battle staged for easy viewing.

The combat exercise will bring almost every type of weaponry in the division arsenal into action as helicopter transported infantry, backed by tanks and artillery, attack an "enemy" position.

Firing will be blanks, but the sounds and sights of battle will be spectacularly real.

The division's "Old Reliables" will pass in review on the east-west runway of Gray Army Airfield at 10:30 a.m., and the combat exercise - staged just south of the runway from spectator stands - follow at 11:45. At 12:05 there will be a parachute jump demonstration.

Displays of military equipment will be open for public viewing from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. and again from 12:51 p.m. to 4 p.m.

A carnival midway, with games and refreshment stands, will also be in operation those hours. They will be closed during the review and exercise.

The Fort Lewis Military Museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Maj. Gen. Volney F. Warner, 9th Infantry Division and Fort Lewis commander, will receive the review, and Brig. Gen. Howard F. Stone, assistant division commander, will be the commander of troops.

After Gen. Warner and 9th Division Command Sergeant Major, Maurice Ferry, have "trooped the line" to inspect the ranks, the general will present awards to the winners of the "Octofoil Competition" combat team events last month.

The combat exercise will bring almost all of the division's weapons into simulated action on a battlefield just across the runway from the spectator stands.

Under the scenario, division forces spot an enemy position from the air, hit it first with helicopter transported infantry and then with artillery, with tanks and other heavy stuff.

Signs and military police will direct visitors from the main Fort Lewis entrances to the spectator area.

Mike and Harry Make 200

"He's really neat." With those words, eight-year-old Mike Brown expressed a mutual feeling between him and his new Big Brother, Harry Thomas of Tacoma.

Introduced just over a week ago, Mike and his Big Brother Harry represent the 200th active match in the Big Brothers of Tacoma-Pierce County program.

According to Mike's mother, Ms. Gilda Brown of Tacoma, the two hit it off from the very first. "They just seem to be on the same wave length," she said, in describing the relationship. "You'd think they'd known each other for years."

A handsome youngster with green eyes and a delightful smile, Mike is the second oldest in a family of four children. His parents have been divorced for over five years and Mike's contact with his father has been infrequent and unsatisfying. After many broken promises and disappointments from the man, Mike finally stopped wanting to see him altogether.

The boy waited over a year for Harry Thomas to come along; with his older brother already matched with a Big Brother, Mike said it seemed like a very long time.

An excellent student and the first boy to place in the finals of his school's spelling bee, Mike will be entering fourth grade this year. His favorite subject is reading.

Mike and Harry have spent a lot of time together in the week they have been matched. Harry has been giving Mike some bowling tips and plans to take him flying soon. They also enjoy swimming and just puttering around the house. The pair have plans for going to the Seattle Center and to other local attractions.

Harry, a 46-year-old divorced father of two, is retired from the Army and now works at Boeing as a Frequency Management Specialist.

Harry got involved in the Big Brothers program through a friend who was already matched with a boy. One Saturday, his friend asked if Harry would drop by and explain to his Little Brother why he was unable to come over that day.

According to Harry, "The little fellow was so disappointed that I took him to a movie myself. I was hooked after that."

Big Brothers of Tacoma-Pierce County, a United Way agency, seeks stable, mature men to match with boys, ages 7 to 17, whose fathers are absent from the home. The men and boys are matched by similar interests, geographical area and compatible personalities. The Big Brother is expected to spend a few hours with the boy about once a week. Out of the resulting friendship, the boy gains a dependable companion and a male model for his adolsecent years when adult influence is so important.

It is especially appropriate that the agency has reached its landmark 200th match in this time of our nation's Bicentennial Celebration. As Harry Thomas put it, "We're using up our water, our gas, even our air. Kids are really the last resource we've got."

Any man interested in becoming a Big Brother is asked to call the office at 572-3211.

Big Brothers Reaches Goal

Big Brothers of Tacoma-Pierce County, a United Way agency, topped the 200 mark recently in the number of active matches with the program.

By matching volunteer men with fatherless boys, the agency provides each youngster with a male model and adult companionship during the formative years from 7 to 17. Each pair is carefully supervised by a professional staff member.

Organized in 1962 in Tacoma by a men's church group, the program struggled for several years from lack of funding and low visibility. In 1973, the program was admitted to United Way and began a slow but steady growth. Last year, Executive Director Fick White launched a major recruitment drive by adding a full-time staff person to handle public relations and recruitment.

The agency has grown from 136 active matches in June of 1975 to the more than 200 currently with the program. The Board of Directors, headed by Rich Nevitt, has set a goal of 250 matches by the end of this year.

"At our current growth rate," Mr. White said, "we may even surpass our stated goals. Best of all, we are keeping our terminations to a minimum. This means that the matches we are making are more than just numbers; they are developing into strong relationships.

"Unfortunately, we still have a large number of boys still waiting to be matched," White continued. "At present, we have 144 youngsters on our unassigned list."

Any person wanting more information about the program is urged to call the Big Brothers office at 572-3211.

Something to Think About

By Barbara Henderson

Recently, I was reading the FACTS newspaper and happen to come across a creative writing course for jr. high/high school students being taught at the Afro American Cultural Center located at 1119 So. 17th St. "Class in Creativity" sounded like something where you could be very creative and expressive. Plus, Ms. Frankie Donahue was teaching the course and with all her experience in writing ie, poetry, newspaper writing, I felt that she would have some great ideas for the class.

So, when Thursday came I went to the class hoping to have many people there but to my dismay, I was the only one there. Ms. Donahue and I talked for about half of an hour about our expectations for the course. In the classe, she wants to have discussions, individual tutoring, reading and of course writing. The class I'm sure will be very beneficial to you because over the summer months it is so easy to lose our reading and writing skills if we don't keep in practice. The course if offered every Tuesday and Thursday at 2:00 at the AACC. Ms. Donahue is an excellent teacher, let's not let her ability go to waste. I am sure that this class will be of some value to you. If you don't like to write just come and listen. See you there.

Christian Science Lecture

"Being saved from a materialistic concept of oneself," a Christian Science lecturer will point out here Saturday, July 17, at 11 a.m., puts the idea of salvation in a fresh light.

In his talk, James E. Pike, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, says that as the purely spiritual nature of God is perceived, "we get a new look at man -- man whom the Bible says is the very image of God. This is the salvation of knowing yourself spiritually." Mr. Pike is from Chicago, Illinois.

Mr. Pike's lecture entitled, "What Does It Mean to be Saved," is being given on behalf of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Tacoma. It will be held at the auditorium of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Tacoma, corner Division Avenue and Eye Street.

Several instances of Christian healing are described in the talk, including the lecturer's own experiences in college days which prompted his interest in Christian Science.

The lecture is free, and the community is invited to attend. Child care will be provided.

Requirements for Crossing Canadian Border Unchanged

Donald L. Eide, District Director of Customs, Seattle, advises that, despite increased security at the international border, U.S. citizens are not required to produce passports or birth certificates when entering Canada this summer. As in the past, visitors are simply required to show proof of identity, such as a driver's license.

Both U.S. and Canadian officials recently issued statements following reports that their Customs and Immigration officers were turning back travelers who could not produce passports or birth certificates. They admit that there will be a greater need for security at border crossings this summer because of possible terrorism at the Olympic games in Montreal and at the U.S. Bicentennial Celebrations. However, they are assuring visitors that formalities will be kept to a minimum.

Mr. Eide stressed that Canadians entering the United States this summer will not be required to produce any additional documents either. Canadian Minister of Manpower & Immigration Andras said that during the course of a normal examination Immigration and Customs officers may ask U.S. citizens to identify themselves, however, normally they will not be required to produce proof of citizenship. He pointed out that Social Security Cards and Drivers' Licenses may be used to satisfy examining officers of identity.

A pamphlet entitled "U.S. Visitors to Olympic Games, Montreal 1976" contains helpful information on visiting Canada. This pamphlet may be obtained from the District Director of Customs, 2039 Federal Office Building, Seattle, Washington 98174. It also is available from the U.S. Customs Service, P.O. Box 7118, Washington, D.C., 20044, or from other District Directors of Customs in areas along the Northern border who are listed in the telephone directory under "U.S. Government - Treasury Department."

Court backs illegitimacy rule

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has upheld the provisions of the Social Security Act that make it harder for illegitimate children to get "survivor's benefits" when their parents die than it is for legitimate children.

The vote was 6 to 3, with the dissenters contending that the Government should not be allowed to "add to the burden that illegitimate children inevitably acquire at birth."

The ruling sharply contrasted with the high court's decision in 1974 striking down another provision in the Social Security Act that specified a similar system for differentiating between illegitimate an legitimate children. That provision involved benefit payments to a child when a wage-earner parent becomes disabled.

The majority found the two provisions "distinguishable," in that the provision in the 1974 statute completely barred benefit payments to certain categories of illegitimate children regardless of whether they could prove they were dependent on their parents, whereas the provision in today's ruling does not.

Bix papers' seiqure ok for trial use

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court has ruled that the constitutional protection against self-incrimination does not prohibit the seizure of private business papers and their use as evidence against the owner in a criminal trial.

This is true, the Court said, even though the Fifth Amendment guarantee might protect a person from being forced to comply with a subpoena for those papers.

The ruling, written by Harry A. Blackmun and joined by six other Justices, continues the trend of the last decade toward eroding the scope of the privilege against compelled self-incrimination.

It contrasts with the statement in an 1886 high court ruling that "we have been unable to perceive that the seizure of a man's private books and papers to be used in evidence against him is substantially different from compelling him to be a witness against himself."

Today's ruling on a 7-to-2 vote came in the case of a Maryland lawyer who was convited on a charge of false pretenses, involving a real estate transaction. At his trial in state court the prosecution introduced items it had seized with a search warrant from the defendant's business files. The Supreme Court's opinion upheld the conviction.

Justice Thurgood Marshall dissented from the majority on the ground that the warrant was a "general" warrant, overly broad.

Court rejects 'no growth' zone suit

The Court declined to hear two challenges to zoning regulations designed to limit growth, each enacted in a California community and each upheld by the California Supreme Court.

One case-San Diego Bldg. Contractors Assn. v. City Council of San Diego, (No. 74-1459 — involved a system of zoning by popular initiative, in which a zoning regulation could be put on the ballot for vote without prior hearings. In the case, the voters had enacted an ordinance limiting the height of buildings in the city's "coastal zone" to 30 feet. Justices Brennan and White said they would have heard arguments on the issue.

The second case — Builders Assn. of Santa Clara-Santa Cruz Counties v. Superior Court of Calif. etc., No. 75-111 — involved a measure with two parts: it put a two-year freeze on changing certain areas to residential zoning, absent contributions by the would-be developer to schools costs generated by changing the zone to residential: and it required a greater-than-majority (five out of seven) to vote of the city council to override a protest by a school district that a proposed zoning change would cause further over-crowding in the schools. Justice Brennan said he would have heard argument on this case as well.

Order U.S. feeding project funds spent

WASHINGTON — U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Gasch this week ordered the Agriculture Department to spend $687.5 million between now and October, 1978, on its special supplement feeding program for women, infants and children (WIC).

The decision, in a suit brought by several poor families and the Food Research and Action Center of New York, would have the effect of doubling federal expenditures on the WIC program overnight on June 30.

USDA sources said that the ruling almost certainly would be appealed.

Ronald H. Pollack, director of the food center, said in New York, "I hope this is just the beginning of a rapid expansion of the program." Pollack noted that the order requires quarterly reports to Gasch and the food group of the amounts spent each month in each state.

It was the fourth time in less than three years that Gasch has ordered USDA to spend appropriated funds on the WIC program.

The department opposed WIC when Congress passed it in 1972 as an aid to infants and mothers determined by doctors to be "at nutritional risk."

It did not begin WIC until January, 1974, after three orders from Gasch. All were sought by the Food Research and Action Center, a federally funded, nonprofit group of lawyers.

At that time, the program was a $20-million-a-year pilot project. Last year, Congress increased WIC's annual authorized spending level to $250 million through fiscal 1978, but the administration has refused to spend more than half of that.

Carter vows aid to cities

MILWAUKEE—Jimmy Carter, the likely Democratic candidate for President, told U.S. mayors in convention here Tuesday that the cities are "America's No. 1 economic problem" and he assured them that they have a friend.

In a speech to the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the former Georgia governor charged that the Republican administrations of President Ford and former President Richard M. Nixon have short-changed the cities.

"Between 1972 and 1974 alone," he said, "the Nixon-Ford administration cut $4.5 billion in urban programs and another $7 billion from programs to aid the poor, the unemployed and the medically indigent."

Carter pledged expansion of federal revenue sharing, accelerated public works, increased federal spending for mass transportation, and cutting of red tape to give cities more control over spending of federal grants.

"Today, America's No. 1 problem is our cities, and I want to work with you to meet the problems of urban America," declared the Plains (Ga.) peanut farmer.

"For eight years, our cities and their people and their elected officials have too often been viewed by the White House as adversaries and, quite often, used as political whipping boys," Carter said.

"Too often, our highest federal officials have tried to score political points by pitting the suburbs and the rural areas against the cities.

"I pledge to you an urban policy based on a new bipartisan coalition — recognizing that the President, governors and mayors represent the same urban constituency. I pledge to you that, if I become President, you, the mayors of America, will have a friend, an ally and a partner in the White House."

At the same time, Carter told 350 members of the mayors' organization that he expects them to work for greater efficiency in local government.

Carter asserted, "The first thing we need is jobs, a job for every American who wants one. Unemployment and poverty are the heart of the urban problem.

"Like some of you, I remember the impact of the CCC (the Roosevelt era's Civilian Conservation Corps) and the WPA (Works Progress Administration) in the 1930s, and I think similar initiatives are called for today, but with stress on urban, rather than rural, work projects, and with possible local control over those projects."

Carter endorsed the revisedPublic Works Eployment Act, which would provide $3.95 billion and awaits the President's signature after Ford vetoed an earlier and more costly version.

HEW school record ban beaten

WASHINGTON — The Senate Tuesday rejected an effort to prohibit the Health, Education and Welfare department from requiring school districts to keep records and make pupil or teacher assignments on the basis of race or national origin.

The amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) was defeated 58 to 27 as the Senate continued consideration of a bill providing $57.1 billion to fund HEW and the Labor Department for the coming fiscal year. It was uncertain whether further busing amendments would come before the Senate.

Helms' amendment would have prohibited HEW from using any money in the bill to require school districts, as a condition of receiving federal aid, to classify students or teachers by race. It would have blocked HEW attempts to assign teachers or students to schools, classes or courses for reasons of race.
